

EUROPE SKIRTING PIT OF DESTRUCTION IN IMPENDING WAR

Wonders if Summer of 1936
Will Be Another
Like 1914

WAVERED FIVE TIMES

Each of the Five Crises Have Pushed Her Nearer
Disaster

(Note: In a nightmare of fear that war cannot be averted, Europe has four principal "bad dreams," writes H. R. Knickerbocker, noted foreign correspondent for International News Service, in the following article, presenting four possible incidents which it is feared would plunge the continent into a long-threatened slaughter. The article is the first of six, entitled "Europe skirts the pit," which will appear in this paper daily.)

LONDON, May 4—(INS)—Europe today is a sleepwalker skirting the pit of destruction and all this summer the nightmare of impending war will contend with the dream of peace to worry the four hundred million inhabitants of this troubled continent.

Will the summer of 1936 be another summer of 1914? Two years ago your correspondent visited every key country on this side of the Atlantic to try to find an answer to the question "Will Europe go to war?"

Today the question is just two years further from a negative answer. Since that investigation the continent came close enough to the brink of the pit to peer over and look down into its bottomless depths five times.

Once when the Nazi putschists murdered Dollfuss, chancellor of Austria, July 25, 1934. Once was when Macedonian and Croat terrorists murdered King Alexander of Yugoslavia at Marseilles, October 9, 1934. Once was when Hitler tore up the military clauses of Versailles and proclaimed a new and mighty German army, March 12, 1935. Once was when the British fleet in all its strength and glory steamed into the Mediterranean to make Mussolini stop his war on Ethiopia, September 1935. Last was when the troops of Nazi Germany marched into the Rhineland and Hitler denounced the Locarno Treaty, Germany's only promise not to attack France, March 7, 1936.

Five times in twenty-two months the continent has wavered on the brink and recoiled. With a fatal periodicity the crises have come on an average each four and a half months. Each time, until now, Europe has recoiled from the plunge. Does this mean that she will always draw back in time?

Europe does not think so. Each of the five crises just named have pushed her nearer to the edge of disaster. Each one has shaved off a few feet more of the narrow ledge supporting her.

Dollfuss' murder removed the only personality who could have hoped to preserve Austrian independence for any considerable period. Alexander's murder robbed Yugoslavia of the strong hand it needed to keep his country powerful for peace.

Hitler's proclamation of his army in defiance of Versailles threw the continent into a paroxysm of fright which daily grows. Britain's fleet in the Mediterranean is not withdrawn and Mussolini has dared it with such audacity that British pride cries to expunge the insult.

Finally the tread of German boots across the Rhine bridges aroused such fears in France that Europe trembles in fresh nightmares. The nightmares multiply.

Clouded by the infinite complexities of the present, Europe only dreams of what may happen in the future. None of her dreams are probably probable. All her dreams interlock, fade into one another, mutually contradict. But none of her dreams are absurd, because upon the fears of today depend the actions of tomorrow.

Europe's bad dreams are:
Number One—Austria goes Nazi. Starbomberg and Schussnig have a smaller basis of popular support than probably any other government on earth. Italian money and the promise

THE YOUTH OF AMERICA WILL DECIDE NEXT ELECTION

(Editorial in the Block Newspapers)

President Roosevelt's recent speech in Baltimore, addressed to the Youth of America, invites comment on a number of points. In the first place, it is worth noting that the Chief Executive omitted the usual laudation of Thomas Jefferson, although he was speaking at a Jefferson Day celebration.

We feel that this was very fitting on his part, because everyone knows that he and his New Deal party have cast aside the ideals of Thomas Jefferson, the father of the Democratic Party.

It was interesting to hear the President's remarks about "cushioning depressions," especially in view of his sponsorship of the tax bill, now before Congress, which would eliminate all chances of corporate savings. Even Raymond Moley, at one time Brain Trust member one, conceded in his weekly magazine that this bill would have a very bad effect on business. If corporations are not allowed to keep surpluses, it will mean that employment will be curtailed and wages reduced the moment the business cycle starts downward.

Most important in the President's speech to the Youth of America was what he did not say, rather than what he said. He might have said—"Every young man and young woman coming out of school or college knows there can be no jobs unless business is making some profit." And he should have stated "all young people know that if we do not encourage industry, we pass new bills which hinder and stifle business, this will create more unemployment and, therefore, less opportunity for the young people to get jobs."

President Roosevelt could also have said—"England was at one time not much better off than our country. But when, in 1931, a new election came and nearly all members of its Congress (Parliament) were defeated, and a new Congress elected in which the people had faith and confidence, immediately afterward, business started on an upward trend, more people were continuously employed, higher wages began to be paid, and right up to this year and day England has so improved its situation that no country in the world is doing so well."

The President also should have stated, "We will not allow any more money to be spent in boondoggling. No more will we build for our dogs such a white marble dog pound as was built in Memphis, Tennessee, at a cost of $25,000, complete with shower baths, while many of our people are living in squalor. No more will we waste the taxpayers' money in such insane frivolities, while many of our people are unemployed or working on part time."

President Roosevelt might have said these things to the Youth of America, because our young men and young women understand conditions pretty well, many of them better than the New Deal Administration.

They understand that, unless the Federal finances are put in order, it is the Youth of America, and the generation to come, who will have to pay by both direct and indirect taxation these enormous and ruinous debts.

The depression years have been extremely hard on American youth. Many have seen their fathers, brothers or sisters lose their jobs, or placed on part-time work. Some have seen the life savings of their parents wiped out. Jobs have been refused on all sides. They have been refused because employers, already saddled with the restrictions and handicaps of New Deal legislation, are justly fearful of what new burdens may be placed on their shoulders by the present Administration.

On a Monday they have heard the President, or one of his Cabinet officers, urge industry to employ more people. And then on Tuesday they have read of new legislation passed or planned by Congress which would saddle business with restraints and hindrances which not only prevent re-employment, but may add to present unemployment.

Fresh from school, high school or college, these young men and young women are even more intelligent than many grown-ups who may not have had their opportunities for learning. They know, even at their age, that a business house cannot add employees unless it can afford to pay them. They know that industry is at least as anxious to employ people as those people are to get jobs, because usually the larger the organization, the greater the opportunity for the organization to profit.

However, the Youth of America knows, as experienced business knows, that one cannot give jobs unless there is money in the cash drawer for the salaries of those jobs.

Waiting impatiently on the threshold of life, youth realizes that its opportunities can never arise until, with the overwhelming force of its millions of new votes, it removes extravagant and experimenting officials from high office, lifts the weight of government interference from business, and permits a return to normal conditions, in which youth will find its place.

On the shoulders of the young people of today rests the responsibility for bringing America back from the wilderness of ruinous Roosevelt experiments. In the hands of youth lie the ballots which can bring about the change next November, a change which is perhaps the only chance for added permanent employment and advancement.

Everyone is familiar with the fact that billions of dollars have been spent by the present Administration to gamble its way to prosperity, and everyone knows that this experiment has failed. Even if a large part of the money had not been wasted, and even if there had not been so much graft in connection with these expenditures, the plan still would have failed—because permanent reemployment and new employment must come through private industry, and not through government channels, and private industry cannot re-employ while the New Deal Administration is strangling it to destruction.

THREE DAYS' AFFAIR IS TO OCCUR IN LANGHORNE

Boys and Girls To Mark Youth
Week; Special Speaker
Today

EXHIBITS AND SPORTS

LANGHORNE, May 4—Commencing today the boys and girls of Langhorne-Middletown public schools will participate in a three-day celebration for Youth Week. The "red letter" days are to be today, Tuesday and Wednesday. With affairs also extending into Thursday a baseball game is arranged for the fathers and their sons.

The Rev. W. F. Humphrey, pastor of the Langhorne Methodist Church, will be the special speaker today, Citizenship Day.

The opening talk on the purpose of the week and school co-operation will be given by Cathryn Cook, followed by a dramatization of a typical National Nominating Convention, planned and carried out by the 3A American History class.

Tomorrow is hobby day, with the afternoon and evening given over to hobby work and pets. Since the Parent-Teacher Association meets tomorrow evening there will be an opportunity for the parents to see the exhibits that last year filled each room in the high school building. All parents are urged to see the various types of work that children can do in their leisure time.

Exhibits will include: Art—basketry, beadwork, decorations, designs, drawings—charcoal, crayon, mechanical, pen pencil; leathercraft, linoleum

PRESENT TWO FLAGS TO BAPTIST CHURCH AT SPECIAL SERVICE

Four Patriotic Organizations
Give Silk American
Flag to Church

RECEIVED BY REV. ZEPP

Three Church Societies Present A Silk Christian
Flag

Two handsome silk flags—an American and the Christian flag—now grace the main auditorium of the First Baptist Church, here, having been presented to the church at a special service held last evening.

The American flag was the gift of the Daughters of America, Patriotic Order Sons of America, Fraternal Patriotic Americans and Patriotic Order of Americans.

The presentation was made by Charles Locke, who preached the sermon and made the formal presentation on behalf of the four organizations.

Mrs. John Weik, acting as the spokesman for the Social Circle, choir and Baptist Young People's Union, made the presentation of the Christian flag.

Both gifts were accepted by the Rev. Howard L. Zepp, pastor of the church. There was special music by the choir and the male quartette of the church rendered a selection.

As a closing feature the audience pledged allegiance to both flags and sang patriotic numbers.

American Legation Seeks Aid

London, May 4—After gallantly holding off mobs of raiding, pillaging Ethiopians for nearly two days, the staff of the American Legation in Addis Ababa finally was compelled to send out an urgent call for help from the British, Sir Sidney Barton, British Minister, reported to the Foreign Office today.

The handful who have barricaded themselves in the American Legation, including 11 Americans and 3 foreigners, requested they be evacuated to the British Legation, which has bomb-proof shelters, barbed wire fortifications and a guard of 200 Sikh troops.

A rescue party was sent out to bring in the Americans, who include Mrs. Cornelius H. Engert, wife of the American minister, Barton reported.

The Americans said they could hold out no longer against the riot-mad Ethiopians, and finally decided to abandon the Legation and its new radio station.

Barton said the Italian armies under Marshal Pietro Badoglio would be able to enter Addis Ababa today. He reported they were only 14 miles outside the city last night.

The British Cabinet plunged into a discussion of the new crisis created by the fleeing of Emperor Haile Selassie from Addis Ababa to Djibouti, French Somaliland, where he arrived by plane with his family last night.

It appeared the Negus had not abdicated in leaving the country, although his exact legal status was vague. The Emperor was believed to have ended his reign of the government. It appeared the Emperor would be taken aboard a British destroyer possibly today and transported to Aden or to Palestine. Later he may be brought to England.

May Cause Delay

London, May 4—Italian delay in entering Addis Ababa may be due to negotiations for a peaceful surrender of the city. Reuters News Agency reported in a dispatch from Rome today. Reuters said the Italians would prefer this to outright seizure of the Ethiopian capital. The Italian forces slowed up their drive on Addis Ababa during the past week.

Selassie To Board Cruiser

London, May 4—Emperor Haile Selassie will board the British cruiser Enterprise for Palestine this afternoon, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden announced in the House of Commons this afternoon.

Shot in Hold-Up

Atlantic City, May 4—An unidentified man was shot today when three gunmen staged a daring hold-up of a store at Pacific and Mississippi avenues. The outburst of gunfire started as the bandits fled in a high-powered automobile. The wounded man was taken to the Atlantic City Hospital. The extent of his injuries was not immediately determined.

First Plane View of U. S. Is Given in New "Movie"

Movie audiences get their first glimpse of the United States as it looks from the air in "Thirteen Hours by Air," a dramatic story of transcontinental flying, which opens today at the Grand Theatre, with a cast headed by Fred MacMurray, Joan Bennett, Zasu Pitts and John Howard.

A bird's-eye view of the continent, from New York to San Francisco, forms the background for the action of the film. And it's genuine in every respect, for a complete camera crew actually made a two-way transcontinental flight, taking pictures en route. These pictures were then worked into "Thirteen Hours by Air."

Two Paramount cameramen were originally dispatched from Hollywood to New York by train. Mitchell Leisen, director of the picture, followed by plane with an additional crew of nine.

Records

The white and green of the fourth ward boys and the garnet and gold of the Croydon girls flew high Saturday afternoon at the end of the track and field meet, conducted as a climax to 1936 Youth Week. The high school grounds rang with the cheers of the victors as the contestants participated in the final events and the winners were decided.

There were 10 records broken and three equalled. The girls in Class A broke three of the records while the girls in Class B wiped out the same number. Boys in Class A smashed three while boys in Class B broke one. Two of the marks shattered were for heat records.

The fourth ward boys rolled up a total of 31 points in classes A and B while the girls from Croydon scored 38½ points.

Second honors went to the second ward boys with 20 points while the girls from Edgely finished second for the girls with a score of 29.

THREE LIVES AMONG MANY

How precious is human life! With what interest and sympathy the world followed the news of efforts to rescue three men imprisoned in a Nova Scotia mine.

Those who volunteered were warned that the shaft, through which a way must be cleared, might cave in again. "Twelve miners with picks and shovels went in at once," says the report. Not one hesitated to risk life that he might save the lives of those sufferers in the mine.

Strange are the paradoxes of human relationships.

Three men were endangered in the Nova Scotia mine. Millions are endangered in the Nova Scotia mine. Millions are endangered every day through the selfish carelessness of those who drive motor cars. Every 18 minutes night and day throughout the year a life is snuffed out in a traffic accident.

Lists of the dead and injured are a regular feature of the daily news. "Something ought to be done about it," remarks the reading public casually.

"But what of the three men imprisoned in the mine? Their poor wives! How they must suffer!"

Gold mine rescues are dramatic. Traffic deaths are commonplace.

FALSE FACES

Is this another illusion going bang? Dr. George E. Morgan, prominent dentist of Milwaukee, says the square or protruding jaw doesn't necessarily indicate strong, determined character. It may mean only that the aggressive-looking individual was a thumb-sucker as a baby.

Physiognomists, objecting to the dentists extracting the teeth from their science, might ask some interesting questions.

Why does the baby suck his thumb? May it not be because he is shy and diffident?

And what habit does the little fellow develop when he gets out among the boys and learns what happens to the shy and diffident? Does he push out his chin and assert himself?

Don't ask your dentist; ask the mother who has a boy who used to suck his thumb.

Here it is May—and no one has used "bissextile," which is technical jargon for "leap year."

Nothing is said of Spanish students rioting during their current troubles. Maybe they are now of age and no longer a political power.

It is sporting of the railroads to make the trains lighter while buses increase in size. The meeting at the crossing may yet be an even money bet.

Charley Chaplin is strictly non-partisan about it. The rule now is a new film in each presidential administration.

With all the current now available in the Tennessee Valley, what's to delay the electrocution of some billibilly quartet?

At that, kicking a foe down Pennsylvania avenue wouldn't be so much, as the all-time punt is from Log Cabin to White House.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol, Oct. 29, 1874. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

Last Saturday evening two young boys while turning the corner of 10th and 11th streets, were tripped by a rope which had been stretched across the pavement by some young campers. A great deal of complaint has been made by the ladies about the rowdies that infest this neighborhood and the canal bridge, who use profane and obscene language. If the police would pay some attention to those persons and capture a few, and give them a few hours in the lock-up, it would in a great measure break up the nuisance.

The laying of the mains for the water works progresses.

The Yardleyville Delaware bridge is being repaired.

The Newtown Fire Insurance Company lost $1500 by the burning of Stover's mill at Point Pleasant.

Dr. Johnson, of Kintnersville, Pa., deputy grand scribe, visited Mohican Tribe last Monday evening, and delivered an address, and exemplified the unwritten work of the Order.

The Republican Executive Committee announces that a mass meeting of the Republicans of Bristol and vicinity will be held next Monday evening in the rear of the town hall. Hon. Alan Wood, Jr., the Republican candidate for Congress in this district, John Y. Crawford, Esq. of Montgomery county, Hon. C. N. Taylor, and others, will be present and address the meeting.

The board of managers of the Y. M. C. A. have adopted the following order of exercises for each month: First Friday evening, devotional meeting; second Friday evening, literary subjects; third Friday evening, meeting to consider the best means to promote the work of the association; fourth Friday evening, Bible study—review of International Lessons for the month. When there is a fifth Friday in the month it will be devoted to the subject of temperance.

WARMINSTER—The citizens of Warminster have a remonstrance out in opposition to the proposed new public road near Ivyland. It will be presented to the jury at the road view on next Saturday, the 31st instant.

The hotel property known as the "Black Bear" in Northampton township, belonging to Isaac Ryan, was sold one day last week to Joseph Willard, of Newtown.

There are now two steam grist mills at Hattboro' on the Pennypack Creek. The Hattboro and Horsham Sabbath Schools intend holding their anniversary at the Baptist Church, Hattboro, on next Thursday, November 5th.

The Bucks County Intelligencer has this to remark concerning the proposition made to council by the Bristol Water Company: "A proposition to supply the town with water at the rate of $25 for each plug—the Borough to pay all the expenses of plug and making connection with the main—was presented to Council at a meeting held on Thursday evening, but it being considered an excessive price, the matter was laid over until the next stated meeting. The council are disposed to pay a fair price for water for fire purposes, but desire to obtain information from other towns as to the rates demanded and paid. The general sentiment of the community is in unison with our councilmen, and it is hoped that a price will be agreed upon which will be satisfactory to all. The borough authorities had expected to be able to place at least 30 plugs in order to guarantee ample protection, but at a yearly rental of $25 each, in addition to the cost of purchasing the plugs, it is hardly likely that a dozen can be put in the streets.

The charter limits the rate of taxation to $1 upon the hundred, and this is found to be barely sufficient for ordinary purposes. It will therefore be probably necessary to increase the valuation of taxable property in order to furnish adequate protection at the rates demanded, or else place plugs only in those portions of the town where the most frame houses are located, and where water is least accessible. The amount of borough taxes annually collected is less than $7,000. To pay the water company $750 for 30 plugs would require over 10 per cent of this amount annually.

The foundation for Edmund Lawrence's new houses on Penn street has been completed, and the carpenters are busy at the frame work of the buildings.

The contract for making the Doylestown and Dublin Turnpike Road has been awarded to Jacob B. Johnson, of Fountainville, for the sum of $19,500. The road is 5½ miles in length, and is to be finished in one year.

HULMEVILLE

The annual banquet of the Past Grands' Association, Southeastern District of Pennsylvania, at Lulu Temple, Philadelphia, Saturday evening, was attended by the following from this locality: Miss Marie Adams, Bridgetown; Mr. and Mrs. Horace Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dusenbury, Miss Marie Hanson, Jesse C. Everett, Hulmeville.

The club with which she is affiliated will be entertained by Miss Mary Thompson tomorrow evening.

Charles Afflerbach, Jr., left today for Harrisburg, to take up his duties as assistant postmaster during the special session of the state assembly.

THE "MORE ABUNDANT" DIET

"Please, gentlemen of the New Deal, while you are indulging your dream of Utopia—please, out of the billions of our money you are so recklessly spending, spare the paltry few pennies needed to enforce the pure food laws. If decent men and women are compelled to eat third class food, let them at least know that it is clean food!"

"THERE'S MURDER IN THE AIR"

by ROY CHANSLOR

CHAPTER XXIX

"Why doesn't Gaudio communicate with me?" demanded Gordon. "I've offered myself. I'm the one he hates. I'm ready to go!"

"And so deliver the last of the hated Moridons up to a fanatic avenger!" said Tyler. "You're as big a fool as David! This man will destroy you all."

"But he promised to let the others go if I—" Gordon began.

"Promised!" said Tyler angrily. "Good lord, man, are you completely insane?"

Gordon stared at him. "Wouldn't you be?" he half-whispered.

Tyler bowed his head. "Yes," he said. . . .

Nat jumped to his feet, flung his half-smoked cigarette into the fire-place.

"To think that that young fellow—" he said. "What he did took courage, Mr. Tyler. The highest sort of courage. I'll grant it was foolish, but—"

"Possibly not so foolish," said Tyler.

Nat stared at him. "What do you mean?" he demanded.

"Just this," said Tyler. "Suppose that David was conspiring with Gaudio? Suppose he is afraid of us? Suspicious? Suppose he placed that ad in the paper—as a neat little alibi? In other words, suppose he just disappeared—conveniently—perhaps to go to Gaudio, pretend he was a prisoner—after making a hero of himself by that advertisement."

Nat's jaw dropped. "He knows his father will deliver himself to Gaudio," Tyler went on grimly. "And that Gaudio—will kill him. If Helene or Carlotta know too much—they'll be killed too. But David can make a miraculous escape. Nobody could pin anything on him then. And he's on top of the world, with every cent of Gordon's fortune!"

"Well—I'll—be—darned!" said Nat weakly.

Tyler looked at him grimly. "His own father—his own sister," said Nat slowly.

"Wouldn't you rather it were he than some one else?" asked Tyler.

"Of course," said Nat. "If by some one you mean—You see I know it wasn't she!"

Tyler shrugged. "I hope you're right," he said.

"But you just said it was David!" Nat protested.

"I didn't say it was David at all," said Tyler patiently. "I just said it might be David."

He took Nat's arm. "Come," he said. "It's squarely up to Ruth now."

"What are you going to do?" demanded Nat.

"I'm going to ask her to make every possible effort—to get through!" said Tyler.

"You mustn't force her!" Nat said.

"I'm merely going to ask her to try," said Tyler. "After all, there are lives at stake, perhaps four lives!"

He urged Nat with his lean hand, and the younger man fell into step beside him. Tyler proceeded up the stairs, Nat following. Ruth was lying down and Olga was tidying up the room. Tyler dismissed her. The maid left, stealing back a curious glance at him.

"What is it, Father?" the blind girl asked.

Tyler took both her hands. "Ruth," he said, "I'm going to ask you to put yourself to—to a great test."

She nodded. Briefly he told her about the advertisement in the Star signed "D.M.," about Gordon's conviction that it was inserted by his son, and young Gordon's disappearance. But he did not mention the hypothetical case against David which he had outlined to Nat. The girl shuddered.

"That means that all of these people, David, Helene and Carlotta, may be murdered," he said. "Even if Gordon sacrifices his own life in the minds of one or all of them there must be the knowledge of this, there must be a terrible fear. Perhaps one of them may know this man's identity, his name!"

"Yes," the girl whispered. "Helene's note to her father was—well, peculiar," Tyler went on. "I think she was trying to communicate something. Perhaps she knows the name. I hate to ask you to do this—but it may be our only hope. Will you—make every possible effort—to get through?"

The girl nodded slowly. "I'll—try," she said.

Tyler took the violin from its case. He bent over and kissed the girl's forehead. She smiled. Then she stood up, placed the instrument to her shoulder, drew the bow across the strings. She began to play, softly. Tyler leaned forward, the cords in his neck standing out whitely.

Abruptly Ruth stopped.

"Some one is waiting—waiting," she whispered. "Some one who has waited a long, long time. His mind is filled with bitter triumph. He is biding his time—which he knows will soon come. He is very patient. He knows that he has won."

"Gaudio!" said Nat.

Tyler motioned him to keep silent, touched Ruth's arm gently.

"Ruth," he said, "never mind him. We know about him. Try to get through—to the others! Try to get the name!"

The girl turned a helpless white face toward her father. He pressed her arm tightly. "Try," he commanded.

"Mr. Tyler—" Nat protested.

The man motioned him curly for silence. The girl nodded, drew the bow over the strings. She began to play, not softly, as she had done, but a tempestuous tune, passionate, intense. She hesitated, faltered, almost stopped. Her father leaned close to her. She continued with obvious effort. Then she was playing more easily. The music swelled. She drew the bow sharply across the strings, held it for a moment, dropped the bow. Her face lighted up.

"The name!" she said. "The name!"

The two men stared at her wordlessly. She dropped the violin to her side. When she spoke, it was very quietly:

"The name is Jim Gabriel."

Tyler gave an exclamation, drew out a folded sheet of paper, stared at it.

"Jim Gabriel!" said Nat. "Ever hear of him?"

Tyler glanced up from the paper. "I have," he said. "He was one of half a dozen men, Commissioner Kilrane named to Gordon and me at headquarters the other day, a known racketeer the police have never been able to pin anything on. Got a pencil, Nat?"

Nat produced a stub of a pencil, and Tyler sat down before a table, began to make marks with the pencil on the unfolded sheet of paper in his hand. Nat took Ruth's violin and pushed forward a chair for her. Her face was turned toward her father.

Tyler scribbled busily for a moment or two, once or twice using the eraser. Nat watched him curiously. Then Tyler chuckled, rose, holding out the paper.

Nat took it. It was Helene's note. His eyes went to its second paragraph: "Just imagine . . . My God . . . and bring ransom immediately . . . & enough . . . love."

Through the first letter of each word, omitting only the symbol &, Tyler had drawn a line. Nat looked up, puzzled. Tyler grinned.

"I was sure there was something in that note!" he said. "Thought the girl was trying to communicate. That's why I insisted on Ruth making the try today. Don't you see it now?"

Nat shook his head. "Lord, but we were stupid," said Tyler. "It's as simple as A-B-C."

Nat stared at the note again, at the letters crossed with pencil lines. "J. I. M.—" he said. "I, M.—" He stopped.

"Jim!" he cried.

"Jim Gabriel," said Tyler. "Take the first letter of each word in that peculiar paragraph, leaving out only the symbol &, and you spell Jim Gabriel."

"Then that confirms it absolutely!" Nat cried. "Gabriel's our man. . . . And Gabriel must be—Gaudio."

"Right," said Tyler grimly. "And another thing, my boy: If Helene was clever enough to try to get that message through, it means that she must now be quite—normal."

"Of course!" Nat said.

Tyler went quickly to the telephone. He paused before lifting the receiver.

"Nat," he said, "we've got to take this in our own hands. Gordon's in a frightful state. He'll be scared to death for his family. We've got to strike—through Kilrane—before Gordon knows what it's all about."

Nat nodded, and Tyler lifted the receiver. "Spring 7-3100," he said. "I'm going to be in on this!" said Nat determinedly.

Tyler smiled. "Hello," he said. "Commissioner Kilrane, please. Personal call. Dan Tyler on the wire."

He turned his eyes on Nat. "All right, son," he said. "We'll both be in at the death."

"No, no!" Ruth gasped.

Tyler began to speak into the phone, ignoring her protest. Briefly he told Kilrane the facts. Kilrane was grimly congratulatory.

"I've wanted to get that rat for years," he said. "I'll send out a confidential message. We'll pick up his trail. I'll phone you the minute we strike the scent."

As Tyler turned away from the phone, Ruth rose, her look pleading. "Father," she begged, "you and Nat—you're all I have! You mustn't—"

Tyler took her in his arms. "There, there, honey!" he said. "We'll be in no real danger."

Between them, Tyler and Nat finally calmed her, reassured her, got her to lie down and rest. They went downstairs then, tried to compose themselves to wait. It was hard to do. Twice Gordon came to the cottage. He was like a man in a nightmare.

The hours dragged slowly. Finally, in the late afternoon, Kilrane phoned. He was grimly jubilant.

"We've found him," he said. "He's at the Palm Gardens, a café he owns in the Bronx. Traced him through one of our men, a dick named Flaherty. Gabriel invited him up to his private apartment last night to have a drink! How's that for nerve?"

"If I'm any judge, this fellow has plenty of that," said Tyler.

"Yeah," said Kilrane. "Now, here's the situation: Flaherty got a good look at the layout there. Gabriel lives in a swell apartment in the front of the building, above the restaurant. He's got all kinds of trick locks on his doors. Probably could withstand quite a siege. So we've got to be careful. There are three other rooms on that second floor. My hunch is the two women and the young fellow are in them. Gabriel hasn't been out of the building since last night. We're going to close in on him tonight. Meet me at the Westchester police station at nine. I'll send a departmental car for you. Pick it up out in the main road at about eight-fifteen. Kayo."

"Okay," said Tyler, and hung up.

He picked up the phone again and called Nelson. When the man arrived, he swore him to silence, and then explained what had happened. Nelson's eyes gleamed.

"Am I in on the show?" he asked eagerly.

Tyler shook his head. "There's work for you here," he said. "First, about my daughter: I want you to put a trusted man right here in the cottage. I'll have her maid Olga stay with her in her room. But I want her absolutely protected. There may be a dangerous killer right here yet."

"How about Harrigan?" asked Nelson.

"Good," said Tyler. "Now, here's the idea, Nelson: Not a word about Collins or Gabriel, or any C. H. to a soul. Detail another trusted man to help you and watch everybody else on the place like a hawk. If anybody tries to leave, let him go, but have him—or her, followed. That means everybody!"

"The boss too," said Tyler. "And Miss Doris and Johnson and the servants—everybody! When we grab Gabriel, I'll phone you. I want you to spread the word then that Gaudio has been captured. If the guilty person is here, he may be surprised in showing his hand."

"I get it," said Nelson. "You can count on me."

"ZYZZLE"

Just suppose you wanted to find the word zyzzle in the dictionary. Would you start at the first page, leaf through the entire book and come finally to the last word, on the last page?

That, you say, would be an insane waste of time.

Now, suppose you need accessories for house-cleaning.

Suppose you need soap, or floor-wax, or a pail and mop. Many stores are featuring real bargains in household needs for spring.

Yet you waste time and effort, if you walk from store to store

. . . wander from counter to counter looking for what you want at the price you want to pay.

Instead, you may sit comfortably at home and learn where and when to make the best buys. That's all printed for you in the advertisements of this paper. You have only to read them and heed them to save time, save tiresome shopping, and save money.

Bucks Co. Historical Society Has Meeting

William W. Chambers, Philadelphia, past president of the Philadelphia Photographic Society. Three papers were read at the afternoon session.

Dr. Fackenthal presided. His annual report was submitted, it including in part:

"Our treasurer's report shows that our expenditures have slightly exceeded our income this was due to our building program, but the unexpended balance of our income account still amounts to about $10,000. I am referring specially to this mission to build an annex to our library for the accommodation of our newspapers and certain folios of manuscripts, and to show that our income justifies the expenditures. It was a lack of good judgment, when the library annex was built, not to provide more room for our newspapers. I had no idea that we had so many important files which were hidden away in the dark recesses of the archive room, where they were inaccessible. They are one of the valuable features of our library, frequently consulted, and should be properly cared for and made conveniently accessible to our patrons. There are no other complete files of Doylestown newspapers except those in our library."

Horace M. Mann, curator of the society, also submitted his annual report. The annual report of the librarian, George MacReynolds, was submitted, it including the information that the library at the end of the year 1935 contained 8370 books.

Librarian MacReynolds also submitted a very interesting appendix of accessions to the library from December 31, 1934, to December 31, 1935.

The report of the society's secretary, Horace M. Mann, was also submitted. He stated that the enrollment at the beginning of the year was 414. During the year thirteen new members were elected. There were eleven deaths during the year, ten resignations. The present membership is 406, a loss of eight during the year.

Deaths reported during the year are as follows: Warren S. Ely, Doylestown; Miss Eleanor Foulke, Quakertown; Albert K. Hosstetler, Lancaster; W. J. Keen, Hulmeville; Asher Mattison, New Hope; Henry Palmer, Langhorne; Stacy B. Pursell, Newtown; Mrs. Watson K. Reeder, New Hope; Miss Caroline Rhoades, Bryn Mawr; Henry W. Scarborough, Philadelphia, and Isabel H. Ward, Doylestown.

of Italian bayonets have kept them in power. But Italian money is depleted by sanctions, and many Italian bayonets are abroad in Africa. Twenty per cent of Austrians support their present government. The other eighty per cent are divided between the Nazis and the Socialists whom Dollfuss shelved in his hours.

By any of a dozen conceivable ways Austria goes Nazi, perhaps even before Hitler wants it. Immediately Mussolini throws his army into Austria to keep Germany out. Germany mobilizes against Italy. France mobilizes against Germany. The war is on. This is a dream, but every European dreamer knows even when he is wide awake that it could happen any day.

Number Two—The three million Germans in Czechoslovakia closely grouped along the border of the Reich, declared their independence of the Prague Government and elect to join Nazi Germany. Prague denies their right to secede and mobilizes and civil war ensues. The German Czechos call on Berlin for help. Prague calls on Paris and on Moscow, her allies. The war is on.

This is a dream, but Hitler's program to amalgamate the German speaking peoples of Europe into his third empire remains not only unrepented but paramount. It is a dream it keeps Prague from restful slumber.

Number Three—Britain, exasperated beyond endurance of Mussolini's defiance, determines to crush him. Britain pushes sanctions until they hurt so badly that Mussolini faces either submission and an inglorious end of war and a glorious end. He chooses the latter.

Britain's fleet closes the Suez Canal, blockades Italy. Italy's air force destroys a number of British vessels. France, forced to promise support to Britain, holds her fire with a fearful eye on Germany. Austria's Nazis, free of the fear of Italian intervention, revolt and precipitately announce union with Germany. France, despairing at the quarrel between her two allies, small countries of Europe now arming and conscious that this is her last desperately, not in the hope of being chance before the new Austro-German Reich of 72,000,000 is consolidated, throws her army against Germany. The war is on.

Number Four—Japan's "young officers," untamed by Tokyo's civil government, drive so far into Mongolia that Russia repels with a blow even Tokyo cannot take. War begins in the Far East. As the Soviet forces in Western Russia are gradually depleted to reinforce the Siberian Army and as Soviet transport and supplies grow more and more disorganized, Germany watches with waxing impatience.

Poland, already partially mobilized to guard her Russian frontier, is subjected to German pressure to join a raid to take the Ukraine. Presently Poland has to choose between war with Germany or war with the Soviet Union. She chooses heavy-hearted to go, with whom? Not even the Poles know, but France is pledged to support the Soviet Union against attack and Poland is pledged to support France.

In any case not a single conflict between two nations in Europe today can be envisaged which does not lead inevitably to a general conflagration.

Can the initial conflict be avoided? Some would still say "Yes" but none would dare to say it with as much assurance as even two years ago when Europe was already alarmed. Within the last year men under arms in Europe have been increased by nearly two million men; 400,000 Germans, 500,000 Italians, 200,000 Frenchmen, and at least 500,000 Englishmen, Poles, Austrians, Czechs and men in all the small countries of Europe now arming and conscious that this is her last desperately, not in the hope of being

HULMEVILLE A. A. LOSES TO BORDENTOWN EAGLES

Pinch-pitching by Dell Farnsworth gave the Bordentown Eagles their second straight victory of the week-end yesterday afternoon on the Hulmeville ground as the Hulmeville A. A. team lost the verdict to the Jersey club. Final tabulations were: Bordentown, 7; Hulmeville, 5.

Farnsworth stepped to the knoll in the midst of a Hulmeville uprising in the eighth. Watson, the first batter of the inning, lined a hit to right. Carlen slammed one down to Berkley who made a wonderful pick up and tossed to McCoy, forcing Watson at center. Comly singled over second. Leigh planted a hit over first, loading the sacks. Hemp also singled to right to score Carlen. This was enough for Marvin Erickson, and Farnsworth replaced him. Andy struck out as Farnsworth's first victim and then Black was called out on strikes to retire the side. The Bordentown relief hurler retired the side one-two-three in the ninth.

The Hulmevilleites outlived the Jerseyites, 10-8. The champions had eight runners left on the sacks while the winners had nine. Hulmeville used three hurlers, Devlin, Black and Foster. Bordentown had two pitchers, Erickson and Farnsworth. Warren Bilger connected for three safeties in five trips to the plate to lead the resident team, while for the Jersey club, "Bill" McDonagh led with a single and triple in four trips. Comly and Leigh also had two safe blows each for the losing aggregation.

"Pete" Devlin started on the mound for Hulmeville and after getting out of a tight squeeze in the third when the Bordentown club filled the bases, blew up in the fourth, although not entirely his fault. Black relieved him but was nipped for three runs in the fifth. Foster tossed them up in the ninth. Black whiffed seven during his tenure on the hill.

Errors started Devlin on his way down. Neal Lynch socked a double to center in the fourth. Griffiths hit to Carlen at short, whose throw to first had the runner, but Leigh dropped the pill. McCoy singled to center, scoring Lynch. Salaga was hit with a pitched ball, filling the sacks. Devlin trapped Griffiths off third but in the run-down, Comly threw wild to the plate, scoring Griffiths. Black took Devlin out and went in the box to twirl. He whiffed McDonagh and Erickson, but C. Lynch solved him for a single to score McCoy and Salaga.

HILDEBRAND'S WILDNESS LOSES TILT FOR DOLINGTON

DOLINGTON, May 4—Grove Hildebrand was too wild on the hill yesterday as the Newtown team captured its first tilt in the Delaware River Baseball League. Hildebrand walked 12 batters as the Cornhuskers lost, 7-2.

The Dolington outfit was baffled by the slow-ball twirling of Lefty Russell, who held them to seven hits, which were widely scattered. He was aided by errorless support. Newtown had a total of 16 runners left on base during the tilt.

BRISTOL A. A. VICTORS OVER VISITING NINE

Bristol A. A. defeated the strong Hilton nine which were fresh from their victory over Holmesburg. The game was played on Leedom's field yesterday afternoon and the local nine triumphed by the score of 10 to 4.

Godfrey, the visitors' star twirler, had to leave the game in the seventh inning with the score 5 to 3. Ramsey, who relieved him was hit hard.

Tryan took things easy after the first inning. Eastlack, Roe and Massilla hit the ball hard for Bristol while Barnshaw and Berry were the stars at bat for the visitors.

Pico Places Second in Rope Climb; Third on Rings

Roman Pico, Bristol's gymnastic pride, took second place in the 25-foot rope climb at the Middle Atlantic championship gymnastics, for representation in the finals for the Olympic tryouts, Saturday evening. The meet was held at the Germantown Y. M. C. A. and was under auspices of the American Athletic Union.

Pico, who is also a devotee of the rings, placed third in this event. Fifty men and women gathered to participate in the various classes, coming from numerous colleges, clubs and high schools.

Pico's time in the rope climb, 25 feet, was 6.6 seconds. This event was won by Houston, of Princeton University, in six seconds flat. Pico tied with Horwitz, captain of the Temple University "gym" team, and in the fourth climb Bristol high school's entry made the 25-foot climb in 6.8 seconds, and Horwitz was forced to take third place, his time being 7.2.

These three men, Houston, Pico, and Horwitz, thus qualified for the trials in Yankee Stadium, New York, June 16th, for the Olympics, and will represent the Middle Atlantic District. There will be several districts participating with each having three representatives.

Pico, in placing third on the rings, both flying and still, found stiff competition in Al Winthrop, Temple "U," who retained his laurels for the third consecutive year as the Middle Atlantic ring champion. Second place was secured by Chester Phillips, all-round inter-collegiate champion.

Bristol High school's coach, William Dougherty, accompanied Pico to the events. Pico will have work-outs each day at the high school "gym" in preparation for his activities in New York on the 16th of June, he having qualified for both the rings and rope-climb.
